Martin Stanchv

stu2001321086@uni-plovdiv.bg

Hello,

My name Is Martin Stanchev, I'm a front-end developer who's been freelancing for the past year. When I saw the opportunity you are offering, I immediately thought I fit the criteria and would be a great addition to your team. I've always taken interest in working on intuitive web interfaces which make the user's experience smooth and seamless.

The first time I found myself interested in how user interfaces work behind the scenes was when I jailbroke my iPhone back in 2014. I was presented with thousands of great tweaks which added up to the already great design of iOS 7. Fast forward to the end of 2020, I had my first introduction to front-end development which shortly turned into what I wanted to do for a living.

Nowadays I'm freelancing and perfecting my craft. I recently started getting into back-end development with Node.js and Express, so I could create full stack applications. I'm motivated, hardworking and would like to continue improving as a front-end developer by working on more real world projects.

Looking forward to hearing from you,

Martin Stanchev